What Makes Our Books Unique

Recurring Characters in Eight Story Strands

While each book contains a complete story, the stories often build on one another.

The development of a character and the opportunity to see the story continue gives more depth to the stories.

This in turn means there is more to work with when teaching comprehension skills and strategies.

— I just wanted to let you know my Fluffy and Charlie books arrived a few weeks ago and my Reading Recovery students are LOVING the stories! One of my little girls said, “I wonder who writes these books. I’d like to shake their hand.” The children love the characters, the humour, and the themes. Thanks for the extra Reading Recovery touches: the level, word count, story summaries, and the identification of the ‘tricky part’.

— JoAnn Harris, Reading Recovery Teacher

What Makes Blueberry Hill Books So Powerful!

Shared Reading - Whole Class Activity

Poems, Songs and Reader's Theatre

Shared reading activities encourage phrased and fluent reading with expression.

They are used to teach/review strategies. Student copies are provided in the teacher resource books.

The Guided Reading Lesson - Small Group Activity

The resource guides outline an order for teaching the books with the following lesson structure:

The Familiar Book: The reading strategy from the previous day is reviewed. Students work on phrased and fluent reading. Comprehension is the focus of a closer reading of the book. A reading record can be taken for one or more students.

How Words Work: The principle being taught is shown at the top. The first word is a known word.

Change the onset
not	me
got	he hot	be

Change the ending
big	can
bit	cat
bin	cap

Change the middle top	cat
tip	cut
tap	cot

After the student uses the principle to solve new words, the same words will be read again in the new book.

For additional phonics support see the Cracking the Code teacher's resource guide on page 5.

The New Book: During the book introduction, a strategy is introduced. As students read, the teacher prompts for the use of the strategy. After the reading, the teacher gives specific praise for using the strategy. Then, a new strategy is taught.

Writing: Shared, Small Group or Whole Class Activity

A writing activity related to the book is provided. Also see the writing resource guidebook.

Independent Activities

Activities for students to do while guided reading is in progress. More resources are available in the teacher resource books.

Cross-Curricular Extensions

Suggestions for cross-curricular activities: art, science, books, online resources, etc.
